FAQs

Why are some customer payments sitting in undeposited funds?

This just means they are sitting in a "holding" account in QBO. When those are invoiced the deposit should move over to the invoices as payments and won't be in the undeposited funds.

Why are my invoices or payments taking longer to sync with QuickBooks?

During peak hours, especially in the busy summer season, it can take a few hours for items to push over. The queue is usually caught up by late afternoon/early evening. We are always working to increase the capacity to meet growing demand.

When we add or change a contact to receive invoices, does QB automatically get updated? Which items flow from SM to QB? Which flow from QB to SM?

If your QBO is connected, then invoices will sync over automatically, as well as the contact on the invoice. If you update a contact (say to change an address) that will push over as well. And then any changes made to invoices, like a payment being applied.

If a franchisee updates the managed by contact of the customer through SM, do you know if it will also sync over to QBO?

It depends if they have already invoiced or have existing payments in QBO. Editing anything on the parent invoice will sync to the corresponding customer in QBO (or doing it before an Invoice should sync over when the Invoice is created). In SM, the Invoice will go under the Manager's info and payment will go wherever the invoice is.

If they're going in and adding a managed by association in SM after there's already things that have been synced. By going and adding the payment that's not supposed to sync inside SM, it then resyncs the invoice, which moves it to the parent account. After that, QBO may do some auto-correction on their end.

What if I want to push over additional types of Contacts - not just customers when they are invoiced?

In Control Panel > Integrations > Accounting you have the Push Customers Only option enabled, and none of these contacts are labeled as customer.

So you either you need to turn that off, or fix up your Contact Categories so that they are properly considered to be customers. You can check your customer categories by going to Control Panel > Categories, Tags, and Labels. All of your categories have "Customer" set to false and they will need to be switched.

When I edit the name in QuickBooks, it duplicates the Contact in SM. Why?

Editing the name in QBO will cause duplicates to appear. Serviceminder creates/matches up contacts in QBO based on name, so if it changes there then a new contact could be created when syncing.

There is a setting for the ID after the name that can be turned off in Control Panel > Integrations, the Accounting page, in the QBO section. If you turn that on and adjust the ID in QBO, that should sync to SM and the existing contact correctly.

When updating a contact what fields trigger an update in QBO?

Editing the contact will trigger the contact to publish to QBO. So, even if you click edit and make no changes, then hit save, that will trigger a publish. This only pushes basic info like name and address. No invoices or payments are pushed for these updates.

If a franchisee acquires an existing org within SM, how should we handle the QuickBooks for this?

This depends. Are they staying as two separate organizations or are you moving contacts from one to the other? Are they keeping two different QB accounts and bank accounts or are they combining them?

If they are merging QBO and bank accounts, then in this case, the contacts that would need to be moved from org a to org b. Those moved contacts would now have customer records inside of the newly connected QBO if they are edited. No invoices/payments would be pushed here either, so it won't affect revenue. If a user were to go directly edit the old invoices or add new payments to existing invoices, those invoices/payments would then sync over. Otherwise, they won't sync over.

If they stay completely separate, for instance an owner of a territory in one state buys an org two states over, then there is no reason to move contacts and may need to keep a separate bank account and QBO account. That is a business decision for the brand and the franchisee to make.

Owner has not entered taxes on their invoices? Should they choose a default tax rate to have it turned on or should they add taxes manually when creating an invoice?

They can set a default tax rate - but the owner will also want to apply tax rates to contacts that already exist.

Check their account, they may have a list of rates from QBO but haven't mapped them out in Control Panel > Invoices, Manage Tax Rates > Mapping. If any others need to be mapped the owner can set those in the same area.

Then hit Save and Update All. That'll get the right tax rate on customers.

Then, if the Services are marked Taxable, and any applicable Parts also marked Taxable, the tax should calculate automatically on new invoices.

Also, the owner can edit existing invoices and select the tax rate if it isn't selected already.

What if percentages for taxes are missing?

For the tax rates, they need to be active in QBO and have valid percentages on them for our system to pull them over. We basically just go get all tax rates from QBO, then ignore the ones that are inactive or don't have a percentage assigned to them.

A franchise has their QuickBooks Online integration set up, and generates an invoice. That invoice migrates to QBO through the integration. If they go back in and modify the invoice, will those modifications re-sync to QuickBooks Online to update the invoice on record? What if they change the Service Line will that re-sync and align the QBO invoice with the correct account?

Yes, I confirmed that the service line will update on the invoice in QBO (as well as any other details that are updated.)

Can you have items on the proposal/ invoice automatically sync to a GL account?

No, we do not have that ability within serviceminder. You can set a part (aka item) or service to send to a specific income account or you can check a box to have them show as a "summary" within QBO but those are your only options to customize how to send over and view them on the QuickBooks side.

Troubleshooting

It appears we have some customer payments sitting in undeposited funds that have not been released to us.

If you go to the Reports tab in the top navigation bar and view the Payment Reconciliation Report, you will see Deposit for Appointment under the Type column. You'll see that the deposits are still sitting on the proposals for those appointments.

If you invoice those proposals, it should reflect as a deposited fund in QBO. If any of those appointments are not marked as complete, you can click Quick Finish on the appointments, and then invoice the proposals.

The Invoice Summary report doesn't match my End of Month/ End of Week report.

Usually, this is to do with Credit Memos. The End-of-Month report displays all invoices issued during the month, while the Invoice Summary Report reflects the adjusted total after applying the credit memo.

If you encounter similar discrepancies, generating an Invoice Reconciliation report can quickly help identify differences between invoices and summary reports. This will make pinpointing issues like credit memos or other adjustments affecting your totals easier.
